The first reading -The prophet Isaiah rejoices in the saving revelation of God's presence and power with its message of peace and happiness for his people.

The second reading- continues the theme of joy and points to the coming of God's son as the fruit of all the prophecies and the fulfilment of God's plan.

The Gospel - St John reflects with wonder upon the Incarnation, the coming of the eternal Word in human form which he himself had witnessed. (Synopsis Intercom)

Announcements

Play your part in keeping Christ in Christmas

We hope you have heard the recent remarks of The Equality and Human Rights Commission (EHRC) about Christmas. The Commission has said that employers should 'stop worrying about offending people of other religious beliefs and allow their staff to celebrate Christmas'.

The EHRC said everyone had the right to freedom of religion and people's faiths should not be suppressed through fear of offending. With these remarks it seems that it is perfectly reasonable to wish people a Happy Christmas, to ask about putting up a crib, and also not to be afraid to expect that prayer rooms are multi-faith prayer rooms, and not limited to any one group. The EHRC chairman David Isaac said: "Freedom of religion is a fundamental human right and shouldn't be suppressed through fear of offending. Lots of employers have now become really worried about doing anything discriminatory regarding their Muslim or Jewish staff," he said. Isaac said laws had been misinterpreted as bosses became over-sensitive about political correctness. Isaac added: "It is OK to hold a party and send Christmas cards. Most Muslims and Jews that I know adhere to their own religious beliefs of course, but to some extent acknowledge that Christmas happens and to some extent, with a small 'c', celebrate it." Isaac warned that some employers were driven to "extreme and disproportionate behaviour" which "could produce some sort of resentment about special treatment." Some workplaces in the UK refer to the Christmas period as "winter holidays" out of fear that linking the season to Christianity could offend people. Isaac's comments come after the government's own integration Tzar Dame Louise Casey also made similar remarks in September. Remember it's up to all of us to keep Christ in Christmas and ask businesses we may use why they are afraid to put up Christmas decorations!

Cardinal Nichols sends his Christmas message for 2016: We have just finished the Year of Mercy in which I believe the Church has grown greatly in its appreciation of God's mercy and of God reaching out to us that we may walk tall. Of course God's mercy literally takes flesh in the person of Jesus and in that incarnation we learn that God dwells among us - especially in the poor and in those who are most on the margins of society. So as we come to receive again the word of God and his mercy, our hearts need to be overflowing with compassion; for those nearest to us who we love, for those who will probably spend Christmas alone, for those who are suffering in mind and body and for the so many people without homes who are keenly aware of being virtually abandoned at this time of the year. Let us rejoice mightily but also be generous, mightily generous, so that we might in our lives reflect the great generosity of God and that others may reflect in theirs the joy that we feel. A very Happy Christmas to you all and may God bless you.
